Canadian Labour in Profile: Wage Adjustments, December 2010

Wage adjustments in Canada averaged 1.6% in December 2010, according to the Labour Program's review of 18 major* settlements covering 150,210 employees.

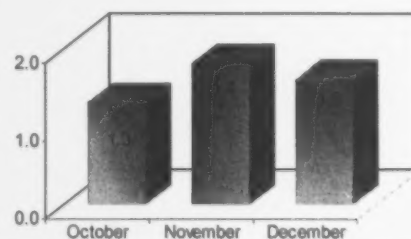

In the previous round of settlements, these same parties negotiated contracts averaging 49.1 months in duration, and wage adjustments averaging 1.8%. In December 2010, the same parties reported the following figures: 42.6 months and 1.6% respectively.

Wage adjustments in the public sector for the period under review averaged 1.6% for 125,280 employees covering ten agreements. Private-sector wage adjustments averaged 1.4% for 24,930 employees over eight agreements.

Range of wage adjustments, December 2010

Wage adjustments in December 2010 ranged from a high of 3.0% for 1,350 plant and maintenance employees with Bombardier Inc. (Montréal), to a wage freeze for 650 trucking employees with Allied Systems (Canada) Company.

Percentage wage adjustments in major settlements (by month, 2010)

The largest concentration of employees (61%) involved three Government of Canada agreements providing 91,600 public servants with an average annual wage increase of 1.7%. In Quebec, a settlement with the Bureaux coordonnateurs de la garde en milieu familial (a non-profit agency coordinating child-care services) provided 12,800 workers with an average annual wage adjustment of 1.2% over three years.

Overall, approximately 96% of employees covered in settlements during this period under review received wage adjustments in the 1.0 to 1.9% range.

Wage adjustments in the education health and social services sector (featuring the second largest concentration of employees) averaged 1.2%.

All jurisdictions recorded average annual wage adjustments under 2.0%. The federal jurisdiction reported an average of 1.7%. Among the provinces, Quebec and Ontario reported an average of 1.3%. British Columbia reported a 1.6% average annual wage adjustment.

Across the private sector, average wage adjustments in December 2010 ranged from a wage freeze (Allied Systems) to a high of 2.2% in both the manufacturing sector (two agreements covering 3,650 employees) and entertainment and hospitality sector (two agreements covering 2,900 employees).

 Note: All data compiled in this review involves major collective agreements covering 500 or more employees across Canada.*

Canadian Labour in Profile: Wage Adjustments, Fourth Quarter 2010

In the fourth quarter of 2010, wage adjustments averaged 1.4%, down from 1.8% as recorded in the previous quarter. The majority of employees (82.7%) received increases in the 1.0% to 1.9% range. Results for this period are based on the Labour Program's review of 77 major* settlements reached covering 487,590 employees.

In the previous round of settlements, these same parties negotiated contracts averaging 57.8 months in duration, and wage adjustments averaging 1.8%. By comparison in the fourth quarter of 2010, the average contract duration was shorter (48.8 months).

Data reported in this final quarter of 2010 represents 25% of the total number of major settlements negotiated and almost 40% of total employee coverage for the year.

Comparing public and private sectors and a review by jurisdiction

Among all major settlements reached during the fourth quarter of 2010, the vast majority (87.4%) were for public-sector employees. Wage adjustments in this sector averaged 1.5% for 426,130 employees within 53 agreements. In the private sector, wage adjustments averaged 1.1% for 61,460 employees covered by 24 agreements.

The largest concentration of agreements (32.5%) and employees (47.9%) was in Quebec's public sector, where 25 agreements provided 233,760 employees with wage adjustments averaging 1.2%.

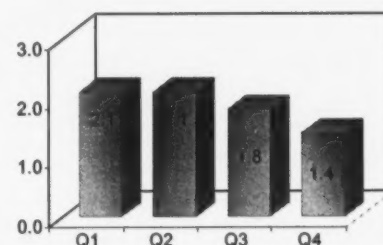

In the federal public sector, five agreements provided 123,770 employees with wage gains averaging 1.7%. In Ontario, 12 public-sector agreements covering 29,010 employees recorded an average annual wage adjustment of 1.9%. In comparison, Saskatchewan had four public-sector agreements covering 26,120 employees, averaging 2.4% in wage adjustments.

In the private sector, two agreements involving Loblaws and two agreements involving Zehrs (24,040 retail employees in total) resulted in wage adjustments averaging 0.5%.

Reviewing public and private sectors combined during this period, wage adjustments ranged from a low of 1.2% in Quebec, to a high of 4.4% in Prince Edward Island (based on a single health-sector agreement). The largest concentration of employees (52%) was in Quebec, followed by the federal jurisdiction (26%) where wage adjustments averaged 1.7%.

On an industry basis, average wage adjustments in the 4th quarter of 2010 ranged from a low of 0.7% in the wholesale and retail trade sector (seven agreements covering 30,720 employees), to a high of 3.7% in the primary sector (a single mining agreement covering 530 employees).

Percentage wage adjustments in major settlements (by quarter, 2010)

The largest concentration of employees was in the education, health and social services sector, where 38 agreements provided 247,660 employees (50.8% of all employees) with wage adjustments averaging 1.4% (based in large part on the Quebec public-sector settlements).

Approximately 0.3% of employees were subject to a wage freeze (in two agreements), 5.0% of employees received wage increases below 1.0% (excluding the two settlements involving wage freezes), and approximately 12% received an increase of 2.0% or above.

 Note: All data compiled in this review involves major collective agreements covering 500 or more employees across Canada.*

Canadian Labour in Profile: Wage Settlement Facts, 2010

Wage increases continued to be moderate in 2010

Negotiated labour settlements in Canada resulted in a 1.8% average increase in wage adjustments in 2010—the lowest since 2004, according to the Labour Program's review of 305 major* agreements covering approximately 1.25 million employees.

In the previous round of settlements, these same parties negotiated contracts averaging 47.2 months in duration, and wage adjustments averaged 2.5%. In 2010, contract durations averaged 41.5 months.

Also noteworthy, the reported wage increases for 2010 matched the Consumer Price Index rate for the year in review—a first since 2004.

The outcome of wage restraint measures

Public-sector wage restraint measures in several jurisdictions are key factors in explaining the relatively moderate figures for 2010:

- In Quebec, 45 agreements covering 359,250 public-sector employees resulted in wage adjustments averaging 1.2%;
- In British Columbia, nine agreements covering 98,190 public-sector employees included a wage freeze; and
- The Government of Canada settled four contracts with 123,220 federal employees, featuring wage adjustments averaging 1.7%.

On the other hand, some provinces had settlements that exceeded the average rate reported for 2010:

- In Alberta, 18 agreements covering 31,680 teachers, office employees and school maintenance staff resulted in wage adjustments averaging 6.0%, and 46 agreements in the province's public sector provided 102,200 employees with wage gains averaging 3.7%;
- In Newfoundland and Labrador, two agreements provided 1,370 public-sector employees with wage increases averaging 5.0%.

Comparing wage adjustments: public sector versus private-sector

In 2010, wage adjustments were lower in the public sector compared to the private-sector, which averaged 1.6% versus 2.1% respectively. The majority of agreements settled (58%) and employees covered (68.2%) were in the public sector.

The public sector saw 177 agreements negotiated, covering 849,330 employees. By comparison in the private sector, there were 128 settlements involving 396,340 employees.

Provincial administration had the lowest level of wage adjustments in the public sector (1.0% for 132,120 employees). The strongest gains were in local administration at 2.6% for 40,870 municipal employees. In the federal administration, wage adjustments averaged 1.7% for 123,220 employees—the same average in the education and health sub-sectors, covering 536,140 employees. Also of note, Crown corporations and public utilities agreements recorded average wage adjustments of 2.0% (16,970 employees).

With respect to the private-sector, wage adjustments were highest in Saskatchewan at 5.7% (one agreement covering 820 employees), followed by Alberta (five agreements covering 9,910 employees and New Brunswick (two agreements covering 1,200 employees) at 3.1%. The lowest average wage adjustment was in Newfoundland and Labrador at 0.5% (three agreements covering 3,670 employees). In Quebec, private-sector wage adjustments averaged 2.2% (16 agreements covering 169,560 employees), closely matched in Ontario with an average of 2.0% for 68 agreements covering 164,490 employees.

Combining public- and private-sector agreements, the smallest average jurisdictional adjustment was recorded in British Columbia at 0.2% (18 agreements covering 114,450 employees). The largest was in Alberta at 3.6% (51 agreements covering 112,110 employees).

Settlements grouped by industry

Education, health and social services form the largest industrial sector with 572,950 employees, or 46% of the total workforce. Within that group in 2010, 121 agreements featured a 1.6% average wage increase. The second and third largest sectors in terms of concentrations of employees were public administration (21.9%) and construction (21.1%). They saw wage settlements of 1.5% and 2.3% respectively during the period in review.

These three sectors combined accounted for 89% of all major settlements during 2010.

The largest average wage increase was reported in the primary industries sector at 3.3% (four agreements covering 5,630 employees). The smallest adjustment was in the information and culture sector at 0.9% (seven agreements covering 8,150 employees).

Additional wage adjustment distribution information

Only one rollback was reported for major settlements in 2010 affecting less than 0.1% of employees covered in settlements during the period in review. The proportion of employees subject to a wage freeze was 8.5% (105,540 employees in 18 agreements).

Among all wage increases:

- 12 settlements in the 0.1 to 0.9% range covered 2.8% of employees (34,970);
- almost half (48.2%) of employees received increases in the 1.0 to 1.9% range;
- 34.1% of employees received increases in the 2.0 to 2.9% range;
- 2.4% of employees received increases in the 3.0 to 3.9% range; and
- 3.9% of employees received increases averaging 4.0% or more.

 Note: All data compiled in this review involves major collective agreements that cover 500 or more employees across Canada.*
